Seniors say meals most important

People 60-and-over rank their priorities in survey

BY NICK TABOR
NEW ERA STAFF WRITER

The agency that oversees services to the Pennyriple region's elderly population conducts a survey every three years to determine what the 60-and-over crowd needs most. It uses the data to build a plan for meeting residents' needs.

The organization, called the Area Agency on Aging, is based at Pennyriple Area Development District. It released the survey results this week.

Across the Pennyriple's nine counties, 72.1 percent of respondents ranked meals in senior centers a high priority. In Christian, Todd and Trigg counties, it was 74.1 percent. No other service received so many votes.

Most seniors who eat meals in senior centers' cafeterias give the suggested donation, so the facilities can afford to feed everyone who comes through their doors, said Jill Collins,

QuickInfo: Top five priorities of Pennyriple-area seniors:

- Meals in senior centers, 72.1 percent
- Home-delivered meals, 70.2 percent
- Transportation, 67.6 percent
- Home health services, 60.6 percent
- Senior center services, 52.3 percent

PADD's aging coordinator. There's never a waiting list or a need for reservations, Collins said.

However, the service with the second-highest ranking was home-delivered meals. As the New Era reported earlier this month, Christian, Trigg and Todd counties have significant waiting lists for this service.

As of Feb. 1, the A.W. Watts Senior Center delivered hot meals to 116 residents and had another 54 on its waiting list. Todd County had 20 people on

Unhappy public not sure who to blame for high gas

Q&A: What makes gasoline prices rise?

BY JONATHAN FAHEY
AP ENERGY WRITER

NEW YORK — Watching the numbers on the gas pump tick ever higher can boil the blood and lead the mind to wonder: Why are gasoline prices so high?

Many stand accused, including oil companies, the president, Congress and speculators on Wall Street. Others assume that the earth is just running out of oil.

The reality, economists say, is fairly simple, but it isn't very satisfying for a driver looking for someone to blame for his $75 fill-up. Last year, the average price of gasoline was higher than ever, and it hasn't gotten any better this year. The average price nationwide is $3.88 per gallon, the highest ever for March. Ten states and the District of Columbia are paying more than $4.

Q: What determines the price of gasoline?

A: Mainly, it's the price of crude oil, which is used to make gasoline. Oil is a global commodity, traded on exchanges around the world. The main U.S. oil benchmark has averaged

LOS ANGELES — Families canceling vacations. Fishermen watching their profits burn up along with their boats' gasoline. Drivers buying only a few gallons of gas at a time because they can't afford to fill the tank.

From all corners of the country, Americans are irritated these days by record-high fuel prices that have soared above $4 a gallon in some states and could top $5 by summer. And the cost is becoming a political issue just as the presidential campaign kicks into high gear.

Some blame President Barack Obama. Some just cite "the government," while others believe it's the work of big, greedy oil companies. No matter who is responsible, almost everyone seems to want the government to do something, even if people aren't sure what, exactly, it should or can do.

A Gallup poll this month found 85 percent of U.S. adults believe the president and Congress "should take immediate actions to try to control the rising price of gas." An Associated Press-GfK poll last month showed 71 percent believe gas prices are a "very" or "extremely" important matter.

Chris Kaufman, who spends $120 a week on gas to travel the 60 miles between his two jobs, at the University of South Dakota in Sioux Falls and at a hotel in Vermillion, S.D., blames the price spike on threats from Iran to cut off oil shipments through the Strait of Hormuz.

Ky. Senate targets housing allowance

BY ROGER ALFORD
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT, Ky. — A bare-bones budget proposal approved by the Kentucky Senate late Thursday would cut spending in multiple ways, eliminating the lieutenant governor's housing allowance, taking away proposed scholarships for Appalachian college students, and scrapping cost-of-living increases in the monthly pension benefits of some 200,000 government retirees.

The Senate approved the two-year, $19.5 billion state budget late Thursday on a 32-4 vote.

The proposal would eliminate a $30,000-a-year appropriation to provide a housing allowance to Lt. Gov. Jerry Abramson. He receives that in lieu of living in the mansion provided for him and his wife.

The budget measure now returns

WHO WE ARE: Tyler Daley, 9, Hopkinsville

Asked about his favorite position to play in little league games, Tyler Daley says it's the batter.

But when he must, he settles for second base.

"Cause you get to be, like, in the middle," he says.

Standing in the center of the field usually gets him a lot of action, as so many balls fly in his direction. He hates the outfield because it's usually boring.

His coach occasionally lets kids pitch, but Daley hasn't tried it so far. While talking he lifts his T-shirt sleeve to reveal a bruise a youthful pitcher left on his bicep earlier this week.

Daley plays for a team called Rotary Club, but he and his teammates always call it "RC." In past seasons he's played for the Tigers, the White Sox and the Thundercats.

Daley is in third grade at Lacy Elementary School, and his mother says he's stayed on the honor roll all year.

Embattled Fla. police chief steps down temporarily

SANFORD, Fla. (AP) — The police chief who has been bitterly criticized for not arresting a neighborhood watch volunteer in the shooting death of an unarmed black teenager temporarily stepped down Thursday, saying he wanted to passions to cool.

Sanford Police Chief Bill Lee's announcement came less than a day after city commissioners gave him a "no confidence" vote, and after a couple of weeks of protests and uproar on social media websites. Lee has said the evidence in the case supported George Zimmerman's claim that the Feb. 26 shooting of 17-year-old Trayvon Martin was self-defense.

"I do this in the hopes of restoring some semblance of calm to a city which has been in turmoil for several weeks," Lee said.

Martin was returning from a trip to a convenience store when Zimmerman started following him, telling police dispatchers he looked suspicious. At some point, the two got into a fight and Zimmerman pulled out his gun.

Zimmerman told police Martin attacked him after he had given up on chasing the teenager and was returning to his sport utility vehicle.

The shooting ignited racial tensions in this Orlando suburb. Civil rights groups have held rallies in Florida and New York, saying the shooting was unjustified.

The police chief continued Thursday to stand behind his agency's investigation.

"As a former homicide investigator, a career law enforcement officer and a father, I am keenly aware of the emotions associated with this tragic death of a child. I'm also aware that my role as a leader of this agency has become a distraction from the investigation," Lee said.

It wasn't immediately how long the police chief would step aside.

The Justice Department and FBI have opened a civil rights investigation, and the local prosecutor has convened a grand jury April 10 to determine whether to charge Zimmerman.

Some people believed Lee should step down for good.

"If they wanted to defuse a potential powder keg, he needed to resign," said pastor Eugene Walton, 58, who was born and raised in Sanford. "His inaction speaks loudly to the black community."

News of the police chief's decision to step aside spread quickly among the 1,000 protesters who had shown up more than two hours before the start of the rally Thursday. They chanted "The chief is gone. Zimmerman is next."

Some carried signs that said: "100 years of lynching, justifiable homicide. Same thing." Others sold T-shirts that said: "Arrest Zimmerman."

"It's the norm around here, where anything involving black culture, they want to wipe their hands of it," said Shella Moore, who is black and grew up in Sanford.

"I do this in the hopes of restoring some semblance of calm to a city which has been in turmoil for several weeks."

Ky. court reverses conviction over Furby evidence

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — After drinking with his girlfriend and another couple one evening in 2001, Richard Gabbard became annoyed with the talking robotic toy known as a Furby and shot it squarely between the eyes.

About five years later after another evening of drinking, prosecutors say Gabbard shot and killed his girlfriend. He was convicted of wanton murder and sentenced to 25 years in prison.

The Kentucky Supreme Court on Thursday granted Gabbard a new trial, ruling that jurors shouldn't have been told about the shooting of the toy when they considered his fate in the death of Michelle Davidson Krystofik in 2006 in rural Lee County.

"We cannot say that the prejudicial nature of the Furby incident did not 'substantially sway' the verdict," the justices wrote in an unsigned opinion.

Justice Will T. Scott dissented, saying the shooting of the toy weighed against Gabbard's claim that the shooting was an accident.

Witnesses to the 2001 incident told prosecutors that Gabbard became annoyed with the Furby, a once-popular stuffed critter that looks like an owl or hamster. It sat in the middle of the table on the front porch of the house.

"Appellant said he was going to blow the toy's brains out if it made the noise again," the justices wrote.

When the toy, which was programmed to utter gibberish, known as "Furbish," then progress on to English, squawked again, Gabbard went into the house, got a pistol and returned to the porch.

Bagel guru Lender dies at age 81

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Murray Lender, who helped turn his father's small Connecticut bakery into a national company credited for introducing bagels to many Americans, has died in Florida. He was 81.

Lender, perhaps best known from promoting Lender's Bagels in TV commercials, died Wednesday at a hospital in Miami from complications from a fall he suffered at his home 10 weeks ago, his wife, Gillie Lender, told The Associated Press on Thursday. The couple, who were married more than nine years, lived in Aventura, Fla., and also kept a home in Connecticut.

"He was courageous, strong and an example to everyone to show how one should go through life with a vision, ambition, a goal and with success," Gillie Lender said.

Lender's father, Harry Lender, immigrated to the United States from Lublin, Poland, in 1927 and opened what would become Lender's Bagels that year in an 800-square-foot bakery in New Haven. Two years later, he had his wife and two sons, Hymen and Samuel, brought over from Poland to join him, according to a history of Lender's Bagels on the company's website.

At the time, bagels in America were sold mostly to Jewish families who enjoyed them with lox and cream cheese.

Murray Lender was born in 1930, and four years later Harry Lender bought a 1,200-square-foot bakery in New Haven as the business prospered. Hymen, Samuel, Harry and a younger brother, Marvin, all went on to work for the family business. Murray would serve as the company's chief executive and Marvin as president.

The Lenders say they were the first to begin selling bagels in packages to supermarkets in 1955. In 1960, two years after Harry Lender died, the Lenders say they started freezing their bagels so they could ship them outside of New Haven without worrying about them becoming stale — the first company to do so.

Burial will be in Green Hill Memorial Garden.

There will be a rosary service at 10:30 a.m. and a Mass Service at 11:30 a.m. Saturday at the church.

Brooks Haven Memorial Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

A native of Hopkinsville, he was born April 3, 1953, the son of the late Edward Babbage and Thelma Mercer.

He was a retired mortician and a member of St. Peter and Paul Catholic Church.

Survivors include his son, Edward (Brooke) F. Babbage, New York; and his daughter, Kristin Babbage, Louisville.

Author presents history of Hopkinsville Hoppers

BY ELI PACE
NEWERA EDITOR

For 28 years, between 1903 to 1955, the Hopkinsville Hoppers brought minor league baseball to Kentucky, according to videographer and author Josh Maxwell.

In an effort to remind people of the team's past and spark interest for a new generation of Hoppers, whose home-opener is June 6 at the Christian County High School baseball field, Maxwell presented a brief history of the former minor league team Thursday at the monthly Kiwanis Club meeting.

Along with Kevin McCann, Maxwell penned a book about the Kitty League.

The league, which included the original Hoppers team and five others, got its name from the states those teams called home — Kentucky, Illinois (later Indiana) and Tennessee.

"It was pre-NBA. It was pre-NFL," Maxwell said of the Hoppers and their place in Hopkinsville history. "Even though those (sports) were around, this was the sport."

Following Maxwell's presentation, Team President Carter Hendricks told the Kiwanis what they can do to help make next generation of Hoppers a success.

Hendricks said the Hoppers still need "beds" from May to July for the players.

He said host families are needed because the wooden-bat league is a pay-to-play league for college athletes and, after each Hopper comes up with $600 in dues, it's not reasonable to make the student-athletes pay rent too.

Additionally, Hendricks said people can support the team by buying season passes for $75 each.

There are 20 home games, and each ticket will cost $5, saving anyone who buys a season pass 25 percent over the cost of buying tickets for every home game.

Hendricks added that there are still slots available for individuals and businesses that want to sponsor the Hoppers.

Also, at Thursday's meeting, Hendricks introduced Finney

Noffsinger as the general manager. The team's board of directors are Hendricks; Glenn Abree, vice president; Amy Peters, treasurer; and board members Kevin Crider, Todd Hamilton, William Turner, Roberto Serrano and James Selbe.

Grayson Crawford will coach the 23-player team.

US unemployment aid applications hit 4-year low

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of people seeking U.S. unemployment aid fell to a four-year low last week, bolstering the view that the job market is strengthening.

The Labor Department said Thursday that weekly applications dropped 5,000 to a seasonally adjusted 348,000. That's the lowest level since March 2008, just months into the Great Recession. The four-week average of applications, a less volatile measure, dipped to 355,000, matching a four-year low.

Applications have steadily declined since last fall. The drop has coincided with the best three months of hiring in two years. From December through February, employers added an average of 245,000 jobs per month. That's pushed down the unemployment rate to 8.3 percent, the lowest in three years.

The report suggests that employers added a similar level of jobs this month. This week's figures cover the same week that the Labor Department surveys companies about hiring in March. Applications are slightly lower this week than in February's survey week, which points to more job growth.

"U.S. employment growth looks to have continued in March at a respectable pace," Jennifer Lee, an economist at BMO Capital Markets.

Separately, a measure of future U.S. economic activity rose for the fifth straight month.

The Conference Board said that its index of leading economic indicators rose 0.7 percent in February, after a 0.2 percent rise the previous month. The index is designed to anticipate economic conditions in the next three to six months. Most of its components have already been published.

Companies are hiring more because the economy is picking up. The economy grew at an annual rate of 3 percent in the final three months of last year. That was better than the 1.8 percent rate in the previous quarter.

Most economists expect growth will slow in the Jobless rate continues slow decline in Ky.

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — The jobless rate has fallen to 8.7 percent in Kentucky.

That's based on February statistics released Thursday by the Office of Employment and Training.

Kentucky's unemployment rate has been in a slow decline for eight consecutive months. It's down from 1.1 percent a year ago.

Seven of the state's 11 major nonfarm job sectors reported increases in employment.

The professional and business services sector, with 3,300 positions added in February, was the fastest growing. It was followed by the state's leisure and hospitality sector grew by 3,000 jobs.

The manufacturing sector lost 1,000 jobs in February. The trade, transportation and utilities sector lost 600 jobs. And the information sector lost 400 jobs.

current quarter to below 2.5 percent, despite the pickup in hiring.

Consumers may be spending less because of rising gas prices and small pay increases. And slowing growth in China and a likely recession in Europe could drag on exports.

Still, growth should pick up later this year as rising job creation gives consumers more spending power.

Lee forecasts growth will accelerate to 2.9 percent in the final three months of this year, from 2.2 percent in the current quarter.

"If someone's been out of work for a long time, and gets a job, they may not go out and spend all they earn," she said. "There's a lag," as they pay off debts and rebuild savings.

Many companies are gaining confidence that the economy is improving. Ancestry.com, a website dedicated to family histories, plans to add 150 new staff this year, on top of an existing work force of about 1,000.

The company has seen a sharp rise in paid memberships, to 1.7 million from 1 million two years ago.

"We're very optimistic," said Eric Shoup, an executive vice president at the company. "We continue to see a really good response to both paid marketing and word of mouth marketing."

There are other signs the economy is steadily recovering. Consumers are more confident and have stepped up spending. Auto sales are rising. Even the battered housing market is showing signs of improving. January and February comprised the best winter for sales of previously occupied homes in five years, according to figures released Wednesday by the National Association of Realtors. January sales were the most since May 2010, the final month that a federal tax credit for home buyers was available. Sales dipped in February but were still 13 percent higher than six months earlier.

Developers are even seeking to build more homes. Requests for permits to build single-family homes and apartments rose 5 percent last month. That brought the annual rate for permits to the highest since October 2008, though they are still running at about half the rate of a healthy market.

The number of people receiving unemployment aid fell. Nearly 7.3 million people received benefits in the week ending March 3, the latest data available. That's about 140,000 fewer than the previous week.

One concern is that rising gas prices will force consumers to cut back on discretionary spending. That could weigh on economic growth and slow hiring. The Federal Reserve says it expects oil and gas prices to temporarily boost inflation but predicts that longer-term inflation should remain stable.

Santorum's best shot: Winning Iowa ... again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rick Santorum is falling so far behind Mitt Romney in the race for Republican delegates that his best chance might be in states that voted weeks ago.

The chief rival to the front-running Romney, Santorum is trying to improve his lot in places like Iowa and Washington, where local caucuses were just the first step in determining delegates to the Republican National Convention. In those states and a few others, supporters are now preparing for county, congressional district and state conventions, where the campaigns hope to keep their delegates — and possibly poach some from other candidates.

Santorum's delegate count could use a boost. He trails Romney by 300 and would need to win 74 percent of the delegates in the remaining primaries to clinch the nomination before the national convention in August. So far, Santorum is winning just 27 percent, according to the tally by The Associated Press.

But the former Pennsylvania senator's campaign predicts that he will significantly increase his delegate haul in caucus states, primarily at the expense of Romney.

"The Romney campaign likes to talk about how they have this superior organization in these caucus states and therefore they are going to perform well," said John Yob, Santorum's national delegate director. "If you believe the Romney campaign's spin that they have this superior organization, but yet they're losing these contests, it must mean they have a deficient candidate who is unable to appeal to the base of the party."

That assessment is simply laughable, Romney's campaign says. And his backers question whether Santorum has a sufficient organization to compete in upcoming primaries while also trying to rally supporters in states that held caucuses weeks or months ago.

This weekend, for example, Louisiana holds its GOP primary on Saturday, the same day county conventions kick off in Washington state.

Rich Beeson, Romney's political director, notes that Santorum didn't get on the ballot in Virginia or the District of Columbia and failed to file full slates of delegates in Ohio and Illinois.

"You're all of a sudden going to be able to organize at a state convention, a county assembly, and start stealing delegates from us?" Beeson said. "We have a plan in place. We will maintain and increase our delegates at the caucus level."

Romney leads the race for delegates with 563, including endorsements from Republican National Committee members who automatically attend the convention and can support any candidate they choose. Santorum has 263 delegates, former House Speaker Newt Gingrich has 135 and Texas Rep. Ron Paul has 50.

House repeals Medicare cost board on party lines

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drawing a new election-year fault line between the parties, the Republican-controlled House voted Thursday to repeal a Medicare cost-control board that has yet to be named but is called for in President Barack Obama's health care overhaul law.

The GOP has branded the Independent Payment Advisory Board a rationing panel, and Republicans hope the symbolic 223-181 vote to repeal it will persuade seniors that they, and not the Democrats, are the best stewards of Medicare.

IPAB would have the power to force cuts to service providers like drug companies if Medicare costs rise beyond predetermined levels. A Republican Medicare plan announced this week would also limit Medicare cost increases, but rely more on market competition.

If it sounds like a debate among Washington insiders, Rep. Jack Kingston, R-Ga., said he would have no trouble explaining to constituents why he voted to repeal the board.

"Do you remember death panels?" said Kingston, referring to the debunked accusation by former GOP vice presidential candidate Sarah Palin that Obama's health care law would allow bureaucrats to withhold life-saving care from the elderly.

"It's not necessarily a death panel, but it is a rationing panel and rationing does lead to scarcity for some," he added. "Who's going to get the needed treatment, an 85-year-old or the 40-year-old with children?"

The health care law explicitly bars the board from rationing care, shifting costs to Medicare recipients or cutting their benefits. But critics say squeezing service providers will stifle medical innovation, achieving a similar result.

Many House Democrats also oppose the board, but for different reasons. They feel it diminishes the role of Congress in deciding Medicare policy. But Republicans made it difficult to attract Democratic votes for repeal by adding other politically charged provisions to their bill.

"Republicans don't want to see IPAB repealed now because they want to run against it," said Scott Gottlieb, a former senior FDA official in the George W. Bush administration. "I think there will be an effort to repeal it after the election."

The House vote came a day before the second anniversary of the health care law, and just ahead of next week's Supreme Court deliberations on its constitutionality. Political gamesmanship aside, it highlighted major differences between the parties on Medicare, the giant health care program for nearly 50 million seniors and disabled people.

All sides agree that Medicare as currently structured will not be able to pay its bills in the long run. The main options to control costs are unpalatable: tax increases, benefit cuts and cost shifts to middle- and upper-income retirees. Most Republicans and Democrats also agree now that there has to be a limit on future Medicare increases. The question is how.

Republicans would convert Medicare into a system dominated by private health insurance plans closely regulated by the government. Future retirees would get a fixed payment to buy either private coverage or sign up for a new government plan modeled on traditional Medicare. They count on competition among the plans to help keep costs in check, but the annual government payment would also be limited by tying it to a measure of economic growth.

That's the basic approach embodied in the new budget released this week by Rep. Paul Ryan, R-Wis., chairman of the House Budget Committee, and seconded by GOP presidential candidate Mitt Romney.

Theoretically, such a system could help rein in Medicare cost increases, economists say. The question is whether it would be politically acceptable to seniors and future generations, with polls indicating that the public is resistant to major changes. Recognizing the sensitivity, Ryan's plan would exempt anyone now 55 or older.

Obama and the Democrats would take a far different approach to cost control, and that's where the IPAB board comes in.

IPAB has the power to force payment cuts to service providers if costs rise beyond certain levels and Congress fails to substitute its own plan for savings. But the law explicitly forbids the board from rationing care, shifting costs to seniors, or cutting their benefits. The Democrats would put the burden on service providers, such as drug companies, insurers and eventually, hospitals.

Obama has yet to name anyone to the panel, whose 15 members must be confirmed by the Senate. Government economists are forecasting a period of manageable Medicare costs, meaning that IPAB's services may not be needed until sometime around the end of the decade.

Democrats say they'd rather defend IPAB any day in front of older voters — and attack the GOP's Medicare overhaul.

"The rationing is in the Republican plan," said Rep. Chris Van Hollen, D-Md., the ranking Democrat on the budget committee. "What they do is allow insurance companies to ration people's health care."

The nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office said this week that both Obama's health care law and the new Ryan plan could potentially create access-to-care problems for Medicare recipients. The CBO cautioned that those could turn out to be greater under the GOP approach, which would squeeze Medicare growth harder. Republicans say that won't happen because competition among health plans will keep costs down by reducing waste.

The House bill is likely to hit a dead end in the Senate. The White House issued a veto threat against it earlier this week. House Republicans all but guaranteed that when they paired by IPAB repeal with caps on medical malpractice awards, which most Democrats oppose.

SENATE: Budget returns to House for consideration to the House for consideration. Some of the Senate’s changes are expected to be contested in the House, which will lead to the appointment of negotiators to hammer out a final agreement.

“I know that in a multi-, multi-billion dollar budget, the housing allowance that we give to the lieutenant governor isn’t a big thing,” said Sen. Tim Shaughnessy, D-Louisville. “I know in the great scheme of things, that’s an insignificant number, but the symbolism of that is important, and it is not insignificant.”

Kentucky began paying a housing allowance to lieutenant governors more than a decade ago in a move intended to save money. Previously, lieutenant governors lived in a state-provided mansion in Frankfort.

Gov. Steve Beshear called for sharp cuts to most government agencies and programs when he initially presented his budget plan to lawmakers in January. Cutting Abramson’s housing allowance wasn’t included in his proposal or that of the House.

The Senate plan also strips a proposal to create the Kentucky Appalachian College Completion Program, which would provide grants of up to $6,000 a year to students attending a handful of private colleges in the mountain region. The cost would have been about $6.5 million over the next two years.

The proposal is a spinoff from an earlier recommendation to turn the private University of Pikeville into a public university. The aim was to boost the number of people in the mountain region with college degrees and spur the economy in central Appalachia. Widespread opposition led to that idea being withdrawn.

Those grants would have been paid for from revenue from an existing tax on mined coal.

The scholarships would be available to students who already have at least 60 college credits from a community college and then transfer to the University of Pikeville, Alice Lloyd College, Clear Creek Baptist Bible College, the University of the Cumberlands or Union College.

Former Gov. Paul Patton, now president at Pikeville and an architect of the scholarship plan, said he’s hopeful it still will be approved this year.

“It would be pretty hard for me to figure out why it wouldn’t, because there has been no opposition that I’ve heard about,” Patton said.

The Senate budget maintains sharp cuts to most government agencies and programs that had been recommended by Beshear and included in the House budget.

Even the state and local government retirees would take hits to help balance the budget. The Senate and House erased proposed 1.5 percent cost-of-living increases in their pension checks.

The Senate proposal also cuts the amount of new debt in the budget to $391 million. That’s $161 million less than the House had authorized and $577 million less than the governor authorized.

The House had proposed nearly $553 million in new debt, and the governor had proposed nearly $969 million.

Senate President David Williams said he considers that a major provision of the budget, one that needs to be preserved in upcoming negotiations between the Senate and House.

GAS: Public unsure who to blame for gas prices

“I think the candidates running for president need to take a good hard look at that and determine what their foreign policy is going to be for countries that threaten to do that,” he said. “It’s going to affect every single citizen in the United States.”

Still, he believes the president has little control over gas prices, adding that it is commodities traders who really dictate prices.

Trucker Cory Nissen of Rutherford Glen, Va., agrees.

“The president is nothing but a fall guy,” Nissen said as he took a break from his rig at a stop in Wilton, N.Y., earlier this week.

Nissen, who is paid by the mile, said he has seen his paychecks shrink because his employer has cut back delivery runs in reaction to the rising cost of fuel. “It needs to change and change quick,” he said. “I got bills I got to pay, and half the time I can’t pay them.”

On the presidential campaign trail, Mitt Romney called on Obama last weekend to fire his energy secretary, interior secretary and Environmental Protection Agency administrator, dubbing them “the gas-hike trio.” Fellow Republican Newt Gingrich promised to roll the price of gas back to $2.50 a gallon if he is elected.

Obama mocked Gingrich’s promise, saying, “They start acting like they’ve got a magic wand and will give you cheap gas forever if you elect us.”

Amy Lis of Buffalo, N.Y., and her boyfriend canceled their vacation to Florida this spring in favor of a three-hour drive to Cleveland for an overnight stay and a visit to the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame. Even that trip will cost more than $100 in gas.

“It’s more than our hotel,” she said as she filled up her boyfriend’s Ford Ranger pickup.

In truth, there is not a lot the president and Congress can do in the short term to push down gasoline prices. They are tied to oil prices, which have climbed in recent months, pushed by increased consumption from developing nations in Asia, Latin America and the Middle East and by concerns about supply disruptions in Iran and elsewhere.

Mike Siroub, who has operated a Union Oil station in the Los Angeles suburb of Arcadia for 25 years, said customers who used to fill up their tanks now put in just $10 or $20 at a time, telling him that that’s all they can afford and that they are driving less or using more fuel-efficient cars.

He himself has joined them.

“I used to have a car with a big V-8 engine,” he said. “I traded it for a four-cylinder Toyota Camry.”

Among the things the government can do to bring relief to drivers is reduce gasoline taxes or push to get more fuel-efficient cars on the road. The first new fuel standards since 1990 are just now going into effect, and the U.S. auto fleet is more efficient than ever.

People are still feeling the pain.

“When I go out to change the prices, they honk their horns and yell at me,” said Siroub whose station’s cheapest grade of gas, regular unleaded, was selling for $4.44 a gallon earlier this week. “The other day one person even gave me the finger.”

Q&A: What makes gas expensive?

$103 per barrel this year. The oil used to make gasoline at many U.S. coastal refineries has averaged $117 per barrel.

Oil prices have been high in recent months because global oil demand is expected to reach a record this year as the developing nations of Asia, Latin America and the Middle East increase their need for oil.

Q: How are gasoline prices set?

A: When an oil producer sells to a refiner, they generally agree to a price set on an exchange such as the New York Mercantile Exchange. After the oil is refined into gasoline, it is sold by the refiner to a distributor, again pegged to the price of wholesale gasoline on an exchange.

Finally, gas station owners set their own prices based on how much they paid for their last shipment, how much they will have to pay for their next shipment, and, perhaps most importantly, how much their competitor is charging.

Oil companies and refiners have to accept whatever price the market settles on — it has no relation to their cost of doing business. When oil prices are high, oil companies make a lot of money, but they can’t force the price of oil up.

Q: Are oil prices manipulated by speculators on Wall Street?

A: Investment in oil futures contracts by pension funds, mutual funds, hedge funds, exchange traded funds and other investors who aren’t going to actually use oil has risen dramatically in the last decade. Much of this money is betting that oil prices will rise. It is possible that this has inflated the price of oil — and therefore gasoline — somewhat. But investors can also bet that prices will go down, and they do. Studies of the effects of speculation on oil markets suggest that it probably increases volatility, but that it doesn’t have a major effect on average prices.

SENIORS: Meals most important issue for senior citizens its waiting list, and Trigg had nine, PADD reported.

Funding for cafeteria meals stretches much further than funding for home-delivered meals, Collins said. Cafeteria meals don’t require packaging or delivery, and recipients don’t give donations as often.

James Patterson, PADD’s family caregiver coordinator, distributed 1,821 copies of this survey. It went out to senior centers, county health departments, extension offices, churches, housing authorities and other organizations throughout western Kentucky. Patterson received 587 completed surveys, he said.

PADD can use this survey data in grant applications, he said. PADD will also share it with city and county governments, health departments and religious communities to develop solutions to problems and improve existing services.

Around 94 percent of the survey recipients were 60 or older. More than 9 percent were above 90 years old, Patterson reported.

Forty percent said they were in “fair” health. Another 36.8 called their health “good” but not “excellent.”

After meals, more respondents ranked transportation a high priority than any other service. Seventy-five Christian County residents ranked it a high priority.

Home health services, senior center services and adult day care followed in terms of priorities.

Of the 19 services they voted on, those at the bottom were senior employment services, counseling and volunteer opportunities.

PADD’s current plan for senior services will last through the middle of 2014. Patterson conducts these surveys on a different schedule than the drafting of the plan.

Anti-abortion bill voted down in House committee

BY ROGER ALFORD
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT, Ky. — A proposal that would have required doctors to allow women seeking abortions to see ultrasound images was voted down Thursday in the Kentucky legislature.

The House Health and Welfare Committee rejected the measure 9-5, despite an appeal from its sponsor, Sen. Joe Bowen, R-Owensboro, who said it would ensure women receive vital information needed to make their decisions.

“There are self-confessions by women who say they’re haunted by the decision that they have made to abort a pregnancy, and if they had seen an ultrasound, they would have never made that decision,” Bowen said.

Committee approves grant application for public transit buses

BY DENNIS O’NEIL
NEW ERA FEATURE WRITER

In its Thursday meeting, Hopkinsville City Council’s Committee of the Whole authorized a grant application to purchase two buses for a new public transportation system.

The application will be for a capital investment grant from the U.S. Department of Transportation. Pennyriple Allied Community Services will apply for the grant, which will require a 10-percent match from the city. PACS estimates the two buses will cost around $44,000 apiece. The request for the grant will now go before city council.

A committee was appointed a year and a half ago by the Christian County Cares 2015 steering committee to study options for improving public transportation in Hopkinsville. This past winter, the committee conducted a survey among 1,600 citizens to gauge interest in a new public transportation system.

Of the respondents, 53 percent said they would use public transportation if it was made available to them. Eighty-three percent said they believed public transportation would improve their chances for employment opportunities.

“Most of the cities of our size in western Kentucky have some public transportation system,” Hopkinsville Mayor Dan Kemp told the committee. “People ask me all the time why we don’t have public transportation.”

PACS estimates that the buses to operate. In a proposal to the committee, Kemp wrote that the buses’ routes would initially be determined by calls for service. They would later be modified based on riders’ traveling routes.

Kemp expects bus fare will be around $2 per ride,

Local woman arrested for alleged child abuse

FROM NEW ERA STAFF REPORTS

A 23-year-old Hopkinsville woman was arrested Wednesday afternoon for allegedly whipping her child with a cable.

The Department for Community Based Services recently contacted the Hopkinsville Police Department to report possible child abuse at a Pennyriple Apartments address. Police claim Charmain L. Wilder beat her 7-year-old with a cable causing cuts and welts to the child’s back, shoulders and arms, according to a Hopkinsville police report.

There was also evidence of older cuts that were similar to the whip marks, police said.

Wilder was charged with first-degree criminal abuse (a child less than 12 years old) and remained at Christian County Jail Thursday evening on a $10,000 bond.

The child is temporarily living with a family member, police said.

Police arrest men on assault charge

Police arrested two men allegedly involved in a March 15 assault.

Corey D. Parker, 36, of Hopkinsville, was at a Max Fuel gas station on Fort Campbell Boulevard when he got into a verbal argument with a stranger. The stranger allegedly punched Parker in the back of the head causing him to fall and hit his head on a steel post, according to a Hopkinsville police report.

The impact caused a “severe laceration” and fractured a vertebrae, police said. Parker was hospitalized and received stitches for the laceration. Surveillance video at the gas station recorded the incident.

On Wednesday, police pulled over a vehicle for excessive tint. Police identified two of the men as being involved in the March assault. John L. Fairley, 21, was arrested and charged with second-degree assault. Fairley was the one who allegedly punched Corey, police said.

Fort Campbell soldier ordered held without bond

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CLARKSVILLE, Tenn. — A Fort Campbell soldier accused of killing his wife was ordered held without bond and the case was bound over to a grand jury on Wednesday.

Twenty-one-year-old Nicholas Durant is charged with murder in the March 3 shooting death of Spc. Shardae Wright. The 23-year-old was found dead of multiple gunshot wounds in the bathtub of a Clarksville apartment.

The Leaf-Chronicle reported another soldier, Deidra Allen, has a baby with Durant. She testified on Wednesday that she spoke with Durant after the shooting.

“He came to my house, knocked on the door and opened it. He was shaking and couldn’t sit down, he couldn’t stop pacing the floor,” Allen said.

“He said he and Shardae were fighting and she pulled a gun and he shot her. ... He told her she was leaving and she came out the room with a gun. He was going to his car and she came after him with the gun. He shot her.”

Durant fled and was arrested in North Carolina. An eyewitness earlier told police that Wright was trying to get away from Durant when he pointed a gun at her. The witness heard several gunshots as she ran to get help.

The eyewitness did not testify on Wednesday. Clarksville Police Detective DeMone Chestnut said the woman was in a medical facility because of the trauma of the shooting.

“He was shaking and couldn’t sit down, he couldn’t stop pacing the floor.”

159th CAB uncases colors

BY DAVID SNOW
FOR THE NEW ERA

The 159th Combat Aviation Brigade brought closure to its most recent deployment to Afghanistan by ceremonially uncasing its colors Thursday at Fort Campbell.

The action symbolized the return from combat of the 101st Airborne Division’s 159th CAB, also called the Thunder Brigade.

“The colors uncasing is the last step of our redeployment,” 159th CAB public affairs officer Sgt. 1st Class Stephanie Carl said. “It probably makes the rear detachment guys happiest, because they can transition back into their normal jobs in the Army and pass the reins back over to other people. It really is a very significant event.”

“It means we’ve gone, we’ve done what we were sent to do, we’ve accomplished our mission and now we’re home.”

Col. Bob Freeman (ret.), the honorary colonel of the brigade, presented a meritorious commendation to Brigade Commander Col. K. Todd Royar honoring the 159th CAB on behalf of Secretary of the Army John McHugh.

The brigade was honored for “assessing meritorious conduct and performing with outstanding service.” The brigade was also honored for its performance during Operation: Enduring Freedom.

“Just a little over a month ago, the brigade — as well as each of the battalions and squadrons — cased their colors in Afghanistan, signifying the end of their engagement over the past year,”

ABORTION: House committee votes down ultrasound bill

The perennial bill, sponsored by a series of senators over the years, has routinely passed the Republican-controlled Senate only to die in the Democratic-led House. It was not the only anti-abortion bill that died in the committee Thursday. Others would have required a face-to-face consultation with medical providers and would have barred abortions in instances where doctors hear fetal heartbeats.

The ultrasound measure has been softened over the years from an original version that would have required doctors to show women the images to the current language that says doctors must make the images available if the women want to see them.

Rep. Ben Waide, R-Hopkinsville, said no one should object to a proposal that would provide women pondering abortions with images that would give them more information on which to base a decision.

"I've never seen a more commonsense approach," he said.

Doctors who violate the provision would have faced fines of $100,000 or more if the bill had become law.

"Every day, roughly 18 women in Kentucky make the decision to abort their babies," Bowen said. "Many regret this decision later. Life-changing and life-ending ending decisions need as much information as possible, especially if the decision can't be reversed."

Rep. Jim Glenn, D-Owensboro, said the proposal infringes on women's rights to decide.

"This is a family issue," he said. "The family should be making the decisions about what they want to do."

Rep. Darryl Owens, D-Louisville, said lawmakers shouldn't try to impose their personal beliefs on all women.

"Most women, I think, probably have enough sense to know what they want to do," Owens said. "And I think most women, if they do this, have not done it on the spur of the moment. They've given a great deal of thought to it. So it would appear to me that, with all the information out there, I don't know why we should legislatively get between a woman and her physician."

CAB: Brigade uncases colors

Royar told the audience on hand. "The ceremony today again marks that transition. We not only recognize the accomplishments of every soldier and individual unit but also the service and covenant that the unit is ready for its next rendezvous with destiny."

In its most recent deployment, the 159th CAB deployed in January 2011, taking over the mission in Afghanistan in March 2011 from the 101st Combat Aviation Brigade, its sister brigade.

Soldiers in the 159th began returning home on New Year's Eve, with the last of the soldiers arriving at Fort Campbell last month.

"All told, the brigade flew in excess of 100,000 flight hours," Royar said after the ceremony. "Obviously, medevac is one of the primary missions that we conduct, and we ended up conducting over 4,000 medevac missions. That equates to about 6,000 individuals that we were able to safely get from the point of entry back to medical care."

Royar said now that the brigade is home, it will begin preparing for its next deployment.

Court upholds state's prevailing wage law

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Kentucky's prevailing wage law is constitutional in requiring employers to pay the hourly wage, usual benefits and overtime paid to the majority of workers in a particular area, a unanimous Kentucky Supreme Court ruled Thursday.

The decision, written by Justice Will T. Scott, turned away an attack brought by TECO Mechanical Contractor Inc. The company claimed the law violated the due process requirements by failing to give contractors a hearing before the state Labor Cabinet to determine if they owe back wages and civil penalties. The company had argued that ultimately gave the agency too much authority.

Scott wrote that Lexington-based TECO has not been harmed by the law because it has not yet paid $64,163 in back wages and $9,000 in civil penalties levied against it.

"Simply put, TECO lost no money or assets due to the Cabinet's demands that it pay back wages and civil penalties," Scott wrote for the court.

TECO Mechanical attorney David J. Guarnieri and the state Labor Cabinet did not immediately return messages seeking comment Thursday.

At least 32 states and the federal government have prevailing wage laws on the books.

Kentucky's law, passed in 1940 and amended multiple times since, requires the Labor Cabinet to set the prevailing wage for every classification of construction worker, from bricklayers to electricians to plumbers. In doing so, the cabinet considers the wages and rates paid on previous public works projects in the area and the collective bargaining agreements relating to the area.

the car Fairley left in, police said.

Vehicle reported missing by Hopkinsville man

An Old Madisonville Road man told deputies on Wednesday that his granddaughter's boyfriend stole his sedan, according to a Christian County sheriff's report.

Shortly before Christmas, George Whitaker let his granddaughter borrow his 1994 Altima to transport her children, deputies said. During that time, the granddaughter let her boyfriend use the vehicle, Whitaker said.

Sometime after, the granddaughter moved to Gallatin, Tenn., and was arrested for a probation violation, according to the report. Whitaker told the boyfriend that he could continue using the car. Recently, Whitaker's insurance company called to tell him the Altima had been in a wreck in Nashville, Tenn., according to the report.

Whitaker called the boyfriend to ask for repair money and the car back. Since then, Whitaker has not heard from the boyfriend and the car hasn't been returned.

The charge listed is the unauthorized use of a motor vehicle. It is valued at $2,500, according to the report.

Air conditioner stolen from rental property

A two-ton air conditioning unit was stolen from an Antioch Church Road rental property between March 15 and Wednesday morning, according to a Hopkinsville police report.

Helen H. Henderson told police that she was fixing up a rental trailer and had purchased a used central air unit as part of the remodeling.

She said she doesn't know of anyone suspicious who may have stolen the unit.

The air conditioner's value is estimated at $1,200, according to the report.

Kelly lands space ship to embrace UFO story

What good is an alien party without a flying saucer? That's what the organizers of the Little Green Men Days festival in Kelly must have thought as they began planning the 2012 event.

Thank goodness the folks in Kelly don't think small. They are constructing a 37-foot-wide saucer for the second annual festival, and that's just about right because the size matches their ambition to embrace a UFO story that rocketed out of Kelly on Aug. 21, 1955. On that date, Glennie Lankford and several members of her family left their small farmhouse at the edge of Kelly and drove about 10 miles into Hopkinsville to report that a space-ship carrying a dozen or so creatures had landed at the farm.

Soon the world was looking to the tiny community in northern Christian County for clues about outer space and aliens. Regardless of what you think about the family's claims of alien creatures down on the farm, it's not a stretch to appreciate Kelly's connection to much of the pop culture and alien lore that came out of the 1950s.

Many people who study UFO agree that the phrase "little green men" had its roots in the Kelly story. Although the Lankford family described the space creatures as silver in color, the story evolved and the word play on "Kelly" and "green" was just too irresistible. The Kelly incident consumes an entire chapter in the U.S. Air Force's "Project Blue Book," which contains the military's investigation of UFO sightings during the 1950s and '60s. And American filmmaker the late Steven Spielberg has acknowledged that the alien classic "E.T.," emerged from plans for a story about the Kelly incident.

Kentucky has its share of colorful festivals and fairs. From the Hillbilly Days in Pike County to the International Barbecue Festival in Owensboro and Little River Days in Hopkinsville, there's no shortage of the homespun creative energy to highlight the history and culture of Kentucky's communities.

Through the years, Kelly and the Lankford family have endured a good deal of teasing and some scorn about the UFO story. But that's mostly behind them now.

It's about time Kelly made the most of its place in history. And that space ship, which will debut at the festival this August, is the perfect symbol of community pride.

OUR OPINION

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Public employees deserve

retirement from second career

The Editor, New Era,
I would like to respond to the letter by Mr. Pitsch published in the Voice of the People section on Monday titled "Eliminate corporate welfare, double-dipping route to benefits."

I would submit to Mr. Pitsch that it is far better to offer tax incentives to corporations to locate in the Pennyriple area (as this is common practice through the nation) and attract new jobs than do nothing and get nothing. Yes, some of these corporations are non-union and some may fail after a short period but some that were well established corporations and been in the Pennyriple many years have packed up and left. Some of these corporations were union and the union played a major role in causing them to leave.

I also find his comments about double-dippers without merit. I am a retired U.S. Army first sergeant, retiring in 1979 after 20 years of military service. After two years of trying to survive on my $639 a month beginning retirement with three teenagers in high school, I realized I needed to go back to work. At the age of 40, I went to work at the Kentucky State Penitentiary and worked until I met the requirements for a full retirement there. In 2001, I retired as a correctional captain and began receiving retired pay from the state of Kentucky. I worked hard to earn both my retirements and sacrificed a lot in those 40 years to earn them such as low pay in both careers and family separation during the first one. These public employees that retire then get rehired in the same position probably do so for the same reasons that I did and I find it hard to resent them for doing so.

Someone has to be hired to fill the position created, so what better person than the one with experience. The public employee is normally underpaid for the position he or she holds and must contribute a portion of their pay toward that retirement. I might point out that I chose these two careers because of the retirement benefits and have no regret for doing so nor would I apologize to Mr. Pitsch for the double-dipping. I happen to believe that he has been or is a public employee and is probably jealous of the employees who had the forethought to take advantage of this because it is obvious he did not. I applaud those who had the fortitude to work these public sector jobs, retire then continue on with further employment to improve themselves rather than do nothing but complain about those who do. Get off your better than thou attitude, Mr. Pitsch, and get over it — it's life.

Halting threat to our liberty

Next week, the U.S. Supreme Court will hear three days of oral arguments in the healthcare lawsuit challenging the constitutionality of the Patient Protection and Affordable Health Care Act, otherwise known as "Obamacare."

We now know the law was based on phony predictions about its cost. After promising the price would be under $940 billion over 10 years, the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office has issued a correction of its initial estimate, which appears to have been based on sleight of hand accounting and tactics by congressional Democrats and the White House. CBO now projects the measure will cost taxpayers at least $1.76 trillion over a decade.

Randy E. Barnett, the Carmack Waterhouse professor of legal theory at the Georgetown University Law Center, is troubled by the administration's shifting rationale in its defense of the health care law: "First they told us this was an easy 'Commerce Clause' case. Then they (said) it was an exercise of the Tax Power. Now it is the Necessary and Proper Clause. If the mandate was so obviously constitutional, the government would not be shifting its position 10 days before oral argument."

Ilya Somin, an associate professor at George Mason University School of Law, adds, "Despite this seeming shift, the federal government's brief almost completely fails to consider the question of whether the mandate is 'proper,' as well as 'necessary.' The Supreme Court has made clear that these are two separate requirements, both of which have to be met. And a law that can only be defended by a rationale that gives Congress a blank check to enact virtually any other mandate clearly is not 'proper.'"

Many wonder what will happen to needed reforms in health care should the individual mandate — the heart of Obamacare — be struck down. That question is answered in a timely new book published by the Pioneer Institute, a Boston-based public policy research organization, titled "The Great Experiment: The States, the Feds and Your Healthcare." In a series of essays compiled by Joshua Archambault, director of Health Care Policy at Pioneer Institute, and with a forward by Jeffrey S. Flier, M.D., the dean of Harvard Medical School, experts propose the states take the lead in reforming health care, as Massachusetts did, rather than dictate a one-size-fits-all system from dysfunctional Washington.

The authors propose what they call "Competitive Federalism" that would allow for a federal partnership, but permit states to fashion their own approach to health care based on their individual circumstances. Refundable tax credits, high-risk pools and Medicaid reform are among the specific recommendations for maintaining the high quality of health care America now enjoys while providing coverage and reducing costs for people whose access to care is now limited and for those now paying the bills.

Along with the bipartisan Medicare reform plan developed last year by Rep. Ron Wyden (D-Oregon) and Paul Ryan (R-Wis.), which was dismissed by supporters of the status quo who prefer the issue to a solution, these are serious and doable proposals that deserve congressional consideration.

As Pioneer Institute Executive Director Jim Stergios writes, "Despite years of effort and mountains of regulations, the federal government has proven incapable of screening for quality (health care), and acting on that information. It is time for states and the federal government to hit the reset button."

The Supreme Court might give them that opportunity. We should know by June how the likely slim majority will rule. Much of our future depends on the Court's decision because it goes to the heart of what the government can be allowed to impose on a free people.

If the high court doesn't invalidate the individual mandate, there will be no stopping government from threatening our most valuable possession: liberty.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, March 23, the 83rd day of 2012. There are 283 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On March 23, 2011, Academy Award-winning actress Elizabeth Taylor, the violet-eyed film goddess whose sultry screen persona, stormy personal life and enduring fame and glamour made her one of the last of the classic movie stars, died in Los Angeles of congestive heart failure at age 79.

On this date:

In 1775, Patrick Henry delivered an address to the Virginia Provincial Convention in which he is said to have declared, "Give me liberty, or give me death!"

In 1792, Joseph Haydn's Symphony No. 94 in G Major (the "Surprise" symphony) had its first public performance in London.

In 1806, explorers Meriwether Lewis and William Clark, having reached the Pacific coast, began their journey back east.

In 1912, Wernher von Braun, the scientist who helped develop the V-2 combat rocket for the Nazis and the Saturn V booster rocket for NASA, was born in Wirsitz, Germany.

In 1919, Benito Mussolini founded his Fascist political movement in Milan, Italy.

In 1965, America's first two-person space flight began as Gemini 3 blasted off with astronauts Virgil I. Grissom and John W. Young aboard for a nearly five-hour flight.

In 1994, Luis Donaldo Colosio, Mexico's leading presidential candidate, was assassinated in Tijuana. Wayne Gretzky broke Gordie Howe's National Hockey League career record with his 802nd goal.

In 2010, President Barack Obama signed a $938 billion health care overhaul, declaring "a new season in America."

Ten years ago: Girls in Afghanistan celebrated their return to school for the first time in years. Opera and pop singer Eileen Farrell died in Park Ridge, N.J. at age 82.

Five years ago: The House voted for the first time to clamp a cutoff deadline on the Iraq war, agreeing by a thin margin to pull combat troops out by late 2008. Iranian forces captured 15 British sailors and marines who were searching a merchant ship in the disputed Shatt Al-Arab waterway Persian Gulf; they were held for 13 days.

One year ago: NATO ships began patrolling off Libya's coast as airstrikes, missiles and energized rebels forced Moammar Gadhafi's tanks to roll back from two key western cities. A blast blamed on Palestinian militants ripped through a bus stop in Jerusalem, killing Mary Jean Gardner, a 59-year-old British tourist and wounding two dozen other people, including five Americans.

COMMITTEE: Grant application approved

though the cost will have to be approved by city council. He said the city might consider selling advertising on the sides of the buses to defray operating costs.

PACS has 20 buses serving Christian, Todd and Trigg counties. The buses must be reserved a day ahead of time and serve mostly Medicaid-eligible riders. Twana Johnson, transportation director for PACS, thinks an expanded service is necessary for the area.

“We think this would be a fantastic service to expand the public transportation in Hopkinsville,” she said.

The committee also approved a proposal for higher garbage collection rates from the Hopkinsville Solid Waste Authority. The new rates would increase the monthly price of garbage collection for a single family home from $20.76 to $21.59. Collection for an apartment would increase from $14.30 to $14.87.

Steve Underwood, attorney for the Hopkinsville Solid Waste Enterprise Board, said the rate increase reflects a need for greater revenue in HSWA. Tony Sicari, the agency’s general manager, pointed to rising fuel costs, outdated equipment and the loss of staff members as reasons for the revenue shortage.

Sicari said they developed the new rates over a two-month period, examining their current expenses for fuel, labor and equipment. They worked with an outside consultant, Bell Engineering, in the process. Sicari feels the new rates will be affordable for customers.

“The rate structure is done in a way that is fair to our customers and is something we could live with,” Sicari said.

If approved, the new rates would go into effect on May 1. The committee forwarded the proposal to city council. HSWA also offered a proposal to allow private trash collectors to operate within the city limits for specific customers. Under the proposal, private collectors would only be allowed to haul trash from construction sites and would only be allowed to collect building materials at the sites.

Collectors would have to apply for permits from the city for each site. There would be a $25 fee for each permit. They would also have to dispose of waste at city dump sites. Underwood said there have been times when HSWA hasn’t had enough containers to accommodate all collection sites and thinks using private haulers will help.

“We’ve found that there are customers that have relationships with private providers,” Underwood said. “We are not afraid of that competition.”

The committee forwarded the proposal to city council. The committee also heard a proposal from Atmos Energy for a project that would extend a natural gas pipeline to the Hopkinsville mega-site along Interstate 24. The pipeline would run 15 miles through the city. The project would require $11.47 million in funding from the city.

The Hopkinsville Water Environment Authority proposed a similar project in the fall. Committee Chairman Phillip Brooks said they are waiting to hear a proposal from HWEA before ruling on the Atmos project.

Noffsinger returns to baseball with Hoppers

BY JOE WILSON
NEW ERA SPORTS EDITOR

Finney Noffsinger is a short woman with a large personality. And you will be meeting her very soon. Noffsinger is the Hoptown Hoppers General Manager and she is visiting nearly everyone in the community hoping to get as much support as possible for the first-year summer baseball team, which opens play June 1.

“We’re trying to get sponsorships, people to buy advertising in the program and of course the host sites, that’s really important,” she said after Thursday’s noon meeting at the Hopkinsville Kiwanis Club where a history of the Kitty League Hoptown Hoppers was presented by Joshua Maxwell. “I’m more concerned about getting the word out to the general public. No matter how much support you have for sponsorships, unless people are going to come out and enjoy our games, it’s kind of hard.”

Noffsinger didn’t start out in the world of baseball. She worked as an Eastern Airlines flight attendant for 25 years until the business went bankrupt. Figuring she could use her customer service background, Noffsinger said she applied to every professional sports team in the country.

She was hired by the Chicago White Sox and her first year was spent putting her customer service skills to the test.

“They hired me to work day games as customer

“Ever since I was with the (Chicago) White Sox I’ve known baseball is my life. You can tell because when I talk about it I smile a lot.”

Hasselbeck understands Titans’ chase of Manning

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Matt Hasselbeck understands why the Titans tried to sign Peyton Manning and plans to move on, taking care of what he controls.

That includes building off his first season in Tennessee.

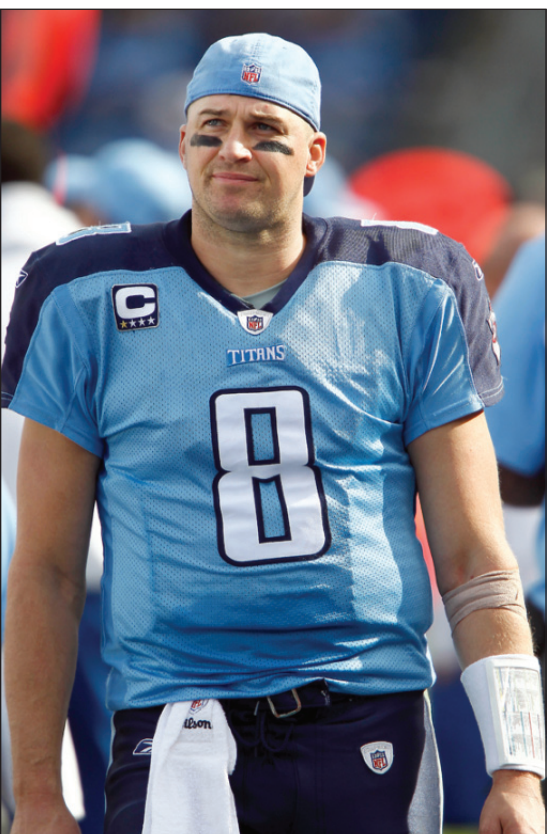

Hasselbeck made his first public comments since Manning chose Denver on a conference call Thursday from the NFL Players Association’s annual meeting. He said he has a ton of respect for Manning and expected there would be interest in the four-time NFL MVP when Tennessee was reported as a possible suitor.

“I just sort of expected that because ... who he was in the state. I get it. It wasn’t a shock to me,” Hasselbeck said.

Hasselbeck said he has heard that Manning might reach out to some of the quarterbacks at the teams he met with during his whirlwind free agency tour. That’s not necessary for Hasselbeck.

“If the owner wants to make a change and pursue somebody in free agency, that could happen on any team at any time anywhere,” Hasselbeck said. “I guess for me at the end of the day ... again I get it. I get it with the Peyton thing.

“I’m excited that I get a chance to finish what we started here, and I’m very confident in my abilities to get it done as a quarterback and so I think bottom line, we’re just happy to get to stay in Nashville.”

MEN’S NCAA BASKETBALL TOURNAMENT

Battle of tradition

UK, Indiana set for rematch

ATLANTA (AP) — At Kentucky, the bar is set a lot higher than most places.

National championship or bust.

“It’s Kentucky,” coach John Calipari said. “Do you expect anything else?”

Tonight, the Wildcats will be matched against one of the few college basketball programs that can give them a run for passion and tradition. If Kentucky brings up Adolph Rupp, Indiana can quickly counter with Bob Knight. Few fans get as worked up about the game as those in the Bluegrass State — unless you happen be among those hoops-crazy Hoosiers.

On the air: TV: CBS, 8:45 p.m.; Radio: WHOP-FM (98.7)/WKDZ-FM (106.5), 7 p.m.

“and I would say the same thing about Kentucky.”

With a dozen national titles between them (seven for the Wildcats, five for Indiana), this is about as good as it gets without actually being at the Final Four. Throw in some enticing subplots — from Crean leading a remarkable turnaround in Bloomington after the storied program fell on hard times, to Calipari positioning Kentucky for another title run with his latest one-and-likely-done dream team — and there’s no doubt the Georgia Dome will be rockin’ for this South Regional semifinal.

But this is merely a prelude for the top-seeded Wildcats (34-2). Unless they are cutting down the nets in New Orleans, this season will be judged a failure.

“You’re supposed to win every game by 25,” Calipari said. “If you’re winning by 15, what’s the issue? What’s going on with the program? If you

Kidd-Gilchrist turning pro

FROM NEW ERA STAFF REPORTS

University of Kentucky freshman forward Michael Kidd-Gilchrist plans to enter the 2012 NBA draft after the Wildcats’ season concludes, ESPN.com reported Thursday night.

The 6-foot-7 Kidd-Gilchrist is averaging 11.8 points and 7.6 rebounds in 31.3 minutes per game.

“He hopes he’ll be able to announce right after they win the NCAA championship,” one source told ESPN.com. “But even if they don’t win it all, he’s coming. He knows he’s going to be a top-five pick. He can’t pass that up.”

Earlier this month Kidd-Gilchrist told reporters he would return to Kentucky.

Clark-Heard hired to coach Lady Toppers

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. (AP) — Michelle Clark-Heard is the new women's basketball coach at Western Kentucky. The school announced the hiring on Thursday. Clark-Heard is a former WKU player who has spent the last five years as an assistant at Louisville. Previously, she coached Division II Kentucky State for two years. In her five seasons in Louisville, the Cardinals have made three regional semifinals appearances and finished as national runner-up in 2009. The 43-year-old Clark-Heard also worked as an assistant at Cincinnati and Nebraska prior to her time at Kentucky State. She played four seasons for the Lady Toppers after being named the 1986 girls' high school player of the year in Kentucky. Clark-Heard replaces Mary Taylor Cowles, who was fired on March 8 after 10 seasons.

Bjork introduced as Mississippi's new AD

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — New Mississippi athletic director Ross Bjork says he's ready to help the Rebels "compete for and win championships." The 39-year-old Bjork was introduced Thursday afternoon. He's replacing Pete Boone, who is retiring in mid-April after more than 13 years as Mississippi's AD. Bjork was the AD at Western Kentucky, where he had guided the Hilltoppers' athletic programs since March 2010.

GOLF

Wi, Dufner share lead at Palmer Invitational

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Charlie Wi felt a lot better walking off the golf course compared with his last round. So did Tiger Woods. Coming off a final round at Innisbrook in which he made a 13 on one hole, Wi hit an 8-iron over the water to 6 feet for birdie on the 18th for a 6-under 66, giving him a share of the lead with Jason Dufner on Thursday in the Arnold Palmer Invitational.

It's the fourth time Dufner has been atop the leaderboard after a round during the Florida swing — except that none of those rounds have been Sunday.

The last time Woods was seen on the PGA Tour, he was being driven away in a golf cart after withdrawing in the middle of the final round at Doral with soreness and swelling in his left Achilles tendon.

Woods, a six-time champion at Bay Hill, shot a 69 without breaking a sweat, much less breaking any body parts. There was nothing particularly special about this round, except for a 30-foot birdie putt that swirled around the cup at the 15th, and a couple of three-putt bogeys that kept his score from being lower.

double bogey; hitting into the water for another double bogey; and somehow escaping with a 73.

■HASSAN II TROPHY: In Agadir, Morocco, Ireland's Damien McGrane shot a 7-under 65 to take a two-stroke lead after the first round of the European Tour's Hassan II Trophy.

Spain's Alejandro Canizares was second at Golf du Palais Royal, the Robert Trent Jones Sr.-designed course that sits inside the walls of the Royal Palace of Agadir. Other than the tournament, the course is used only by King Mohammed VI and his guests.

England's Robert Rock, needing to finish first or second in to make the top 50 in the world and assure a spot in the Masters, had a 77. He had an 11 on the par-4 fourth hole.

John Daly also opened with a 77.

service, but I volunteered for everything," she said. "After about four months I was told by Jerry Reinsdorf (White Sox owner) and the team's Executive Vice President Howard Pizer that they were creating a position and wanted me to take the job."

Noffsinger stayed with the White Sox through the 2004 season before retiring to Kentucky where she and her husband live on the lake.

But in 2005, the White Sox called her again. This time with a better offer.

"They said they thought they were going to make it to the postseason and they didn't have anyone who could handle that so I went back," Noffsinger said.

The White Sox won the 2005 World Series title and Noffsinger is quick to show off the ring she earned while working for the team that year.

"My greatest pleasure was at a meeting when we were talking about what kind of gifts we need to buy," she recalled. "Howard said we need a secondary gift. Jerry said, 'Who's going to get a secondary gift?' I said, 'Jerry I'm not full-time staff so you better make it a nice secondary gift or I will haunt you.' He said in front of everybody, 'I never accepted Finney's resignation, she is getting a World Series ring. I just burst into tears.'"

Noffsinger retired from the White Sox after the 2005 season and returned to Kentucky and took a job as a real estate agent in Eddyville.

Then, baseball came calling again.

"My sister-in-law is Diane Pyle and Kevin Crider told her that the Hoppers were looking for a GM, so she said to call me. It was that easy and here I am."

Noffsinger grew up in Indiana and did not follow sports, although she said she did watch the Cincinnati Reds. Her sports passion came when got married.

"I grew up in a family of all girls and I married this man who would follow any kind of ball anywhere," Noffsinger said. "I got Sports Illustrated and I started reading the sports section so I could have something together. I've always liked baseball.

... Ever since I was with the White Sox I've known baseball is my life. You can tell because when I talk about it I smile a lot."

Noffsinger said she has several community nights planned this summer and hopes the southern Pennyrile will rally around its new baseball team.

coaches and officials.

Hasselbeck said he went through a similar change himself a year ago when Seattle moved on without him. As a competitor, Hasselbeck said the reaction is to say he's got the situation handled. He said he and Jake Locker, Tennessee's quarterback of the future after being drafted eighth overall in 2011, talked while the Titans pursued Manning. But Hasselbeck refused to share any of those discussions.

The veteran quarterback was busy ferrying students to the Tennessee high school boys basketball tournament while the Titans met with Manning at the team's headquarters and later flew to Knoxville where Manning worked out for

After the union meetings in Florida, Hasselbeck said it will be time to get back to work in the offseason program that starts in mid-April.

"If I had to make the choice this year like I did last year, I still would choose Tennessee," Hasselbeck said. "I like what we have going here. I really like the offensive line, the skill guys are very talented. I like the coaching staff. I like the division that we're in."

"I like everything about it." A three-time Pro Bowler, Hasselbeck is coming off one of his best seasons in his career and one of Tennessee's best by a quarterback despite not having an offseason to learn a new offense.

Seek God’s will on how to use musical gifts

DEAR REV. GRAHAM: All I’ve ever wanted to be is a famous pop singer. But I tried out recently for a television contest and they said I didn’t have what it takes. Now I’m really depressed. Why didn’t God let me achieve my dreams? I’m 17 years old. — L.J.

DEAR L.J.: I know this has been a great disappointment to you, but God knows all about you, and the most important thing I can urge you to do is to commit your life and your future into His hands. God loves you, and He knows what is best for you.

After all, have you ever asked yourself why you had this as your goal? I don’t know what your answer would be, of course, but I do know this: Fame can be a very dangerous thing. Yes, it might look glamorous to have millions of people liking you and cheering you on but is it really? How many people in the public eye are truly happy? How many celebrities fall victim to addiction, divorce, or even suicide? Over the years, countless celebrities have confessed to me how empty their lives really were.

MY ANSWER

Instead, I urge you to commit your life to Christ and seek His will for your future. God made you, and He wants you to use whatever gifts He has given you for His glory. Turn to Jesus and ask Him to come into your life today. You’ll never regret it.

Then seek God’s will for your future. Almost your whole life is ahead of you; don’t waste it. Instead commit your life to Christ and learn to walk with Him every day. Remember: God’s way is always best.

Check overpayment scams target consumers selling cars or other valuable items through classified ads or online auction sites. Unsuspecting sellers get stuck when scammers pass off bogus cashiers checks, corporate checks, or personal checks. If you're selling something, don't accept a check for more than the selling price, no matter how tempting the offer or how convincing the story, especially if it is from an out of town buyer. Ask the buyer to write the check for the correct amount. If the buyer refuses to send the correct amount, return the check. Don't send the merchandise. If you think you've been targeted by a counterfeit check scam, report it to the Federal Trade Commission. Visit www.ftc.gov or call 1-877-FTC-HELP (1-877-382-4357) for more details or to report suspected fraud. This is a public service announcement brought to you by this newspaper.
